To Spend Your Holidays In Vietnam

VIETNAM

DESTINATIONS

Hanoi

Hanoi is the capital of Northern Vietnam. Being the capital of the country, Hanoi always holds a special position in Vietnamese people's hearts. Antique yet energetic, traditional yet modern, crowded yet tranquil, the charm of Hanoi is irresistible and multifaceted. The city is also known as Thang Long – Ascending Dragon, with the hope that the country would boomingly flourish like a dragon lifting its wing up high into the sky.

Halong Bay

With thousands of limestone islands and crystal clear ocean, the beauty of Halong Bay seems to be heaven sent and out of this world. The name Halong means Descending Dragon – such an interesting contradiction with the old name of Hanoi. Being recognized by UNESCO as a World's Natural Heritage, undeniably, Halong Bay is among the most attractive destinations

Cat Ba

Around the southeastern edge of Halong Bay is Cat Ba Island, the largest among nearly 370 islands of Cat Ba Archipelago. The island is a part of Hai Phong City, the most important port city of Vietnam. In addition, Cat Ba shows considerable biological diversity, in terms of both marine and terrestrial ecosystems such as coral reefs, limestone karsts, and tropical forests.

Ninh Binh

Possessing a wide range of beautiful attractions and historical spots related to Vietnam's feudal palace in Dinh and Early Le Dynasty, the tourism potential of Ninh Binh province is nowhere to be found. With the name "Halong Bay on land", the province is rich in biodiversity with an astounding abundance of fauna and flora, a considerable number of karst towers, caves, grottoes, lakes,

Mai Chau

About 150 kilometers away from Hanoi, in the vicinity of Hoa Binh province, northwestern Vietnam, Mai Chau is a rural district of enticing scenery attracting several tourists. This mountainous area is famous for its pile dwellings, also known as Thai stilt houses, which are made of bamboos and timbers. Being 10 or 12 feet higher than the ground, these houses keep Mai Chau locals away from flooding and wild animals.

Sa Pa

Sapa is a land of harmonious layout and poetic scenery thanks to its appealing landscape. Hiding among the floating clouds, at an average altitude of 1,500 to 1,800 kilometers, Sapa is much like a spot on air, humbly and quietly surrounded by a magical mist, breaking into natural miracles.

Phong Nha Ke Bang

Phong Nha – Ke Bang National Park owns an extremely complex karst landscape as well as considerably remarkable geographic features, making the area one of the most extraordinary ecosystems all over the world.

Hue

Hue city was once the imperial capital of Vietnam in the Nguyen Dynasty, during the period of 1802-1945.

The city's complex of historic monuments has brought Hue the UNESCO title of a World Cultural Heritage since 1993. Having the Huong River winds its way along Hoang Thanh (Imperial City), Tu Cam Thanh (Forbidden Purple City) and Dai Noi (Inner City), Hue's tourism is facilitated with both beautiful natural settings and unique historical architecture.

Hoi An

Hoi An is another World Heritage Site of Vietnam. Surprisingly, in our present time, Hoi An still successfully preserves its original appearance. Used to be an international trading port and commercial centre between the 15th and the 19th century, most of Hoi An's constructions, buildings and streets, represent not only native but also foreign characteristics.

Da Lat

Within a one-day visit to Da Lat, you can fully experience a year's four seasons. Astounding, huh? Spring is in the morning as it is a little bit warm and everything is covered in a thin layer of fog. Summer comes at noon when the fog goes off, and it is getting hot in here, don't you see? Afternoon is autumn with cool weather and light breezes, turning everything into a romantic squeeze.

Da Nang

Danang is the country's fourth densely populated city and also fourth biggest economic centre. Its name is derived from the ancient Cham word 'dak nan' which means "wide waterway", referring to the city's situation at Han River estuary. During its time of history, Danang is closely related to Sa Huynh culture, the precursor of Champa civilization.

Nha Trang

One of the most beautiful bays of the world, chiefly known for its sparkling silver sand beaches as well as entertaining scuba diving and kite surfing activities, Nha Trang is widely known as the Emerald of South China Sea. Actually, the name 'Nha Trang' is a misspelling from a Champa's name for Cai River – Ya Trang, meaning Reed River.

Mui Ne

Since a total eclipse on the area in the year of 1995, Mui Ne has stepped into the zone of a resort destination from the standpoint of a fishing village. With an average temperature of 27 Celsius degrees as well as a dry and hot climate all the year round, the tropical beach of Mui Ne is in the limelight mainly because of its powerful waves and mighty winds, marking kite boarding and wind surfing two of its 'trademark' attractiveness.

Con Dao

Con Dao is a collection of 16 islands with the total area of 76 square kilometers. Being endorsed by nature with stunning pristine beaches, icy blue water, stretching smooth sands, and amazingly fresh air, Con Dao is taken into account as a paradise of resort.

Ho Chi Minh City

The energetic, dynamic yet classic beauty of Ho Chi Minh City, also known as Saigon, refuses to be forgotten by anyone. It is not only the largest city but also the biggest centre regarding economics, technology and culture among the country.

Mekong Delta

Minh City to the west is Mekong Delta, a mesmerizing destination surrounded by endless water. Among the region, it is all about a floating life – a life revolves around the Mekong river as several villages within the region are accessible not by roads but by waterways, and all daily activities like trading and working are conducted by the river banks.
